

Relationship Workshop

"Keeping in Love"

With Beth Falch-Nielsen, RCC, Certified Hakomi Therapist and Trainer and Dennis Brown, Ph.D., Registered Psychologist, and Certified Hakomi Therapist

August 21-22, 2010

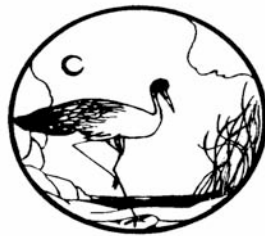

*Providence Renewal Centre
Edmonton, Alberta*

Almost all couples* have had the experience of falling in love. "Keeping in Love" takes falling in love to the next level. Using mindfulness and compassion, this workshop will teach skills needed to sustain a healthy, respectful, and mutually rewarding relationship over time.

Often couples find themselves in "stuck places"-relationships that have become too busy, too painful, or too flat. Our ways of trying to get out of these stuck places often become loops that keep us from getting unstuck. Often one or both of the partners start to wonder if the relationship is worth saving, and begin seeing the other as "the enemy", usually both are desperately wanting out of the pain.

This workshop will offer experiential exercises and will teach concrete skills to take home. It is an opportunity to stop doing what isn't working, and to start doing something different. It will also be an opportunity to have a different experience - to re-connect, to shift some attitudes, and to learn some different models of how to nourish and take care of a relationship.

For those who are not having "problems" in the relationship, but just want to deepen what you already have, this workshop will also offer experiences to further explore your connection to each other - to help "keeping in love".
